

Matt Hill

elevator 1

you've got to love an elevator that feels like it's giving everything it's got

opinion 1

i will say
it's a good thing
luke skywalker
was able to blow up
the death star

printer 3

i like a printer
that always wakes up
in the middle of the night
like a cat

product 1

as seen on tv
it's the perfect little thing to fiddle with
while you're crying

research 1

why do we still have weapons research
the ones we have now
work pretty fucking well

upstairs 4

my city bathroom window
lets the sun
warm the toilet seat
like a big family

volume 1

i'm going to kiss you
on the back of your hand
in four hours
and ten minute

Matt Hill is majoring in Creative Nonfiction at Columbia, but his recent work consists solely of twenty-syllable poems. He has expressed plans to start speaking in them, too.