

User Experience and Interaction Design (MA)

Estimated Program Costs

Columbia College Chicago's one-year graduate program in User Experience and Interaction Design will challenge you creatively and technically and combines both the "soft" and "hard" skills demanded by the industry. From leadership and project management to development and programming, you'll learn how to both design and implement products.

To earn a Master of Arts in User Experience and Interaction Design at Columbia, you must complete 31 credit hours. The below chart reflects the typical costs of a full-time student in this program:

	TOTAL COSTS FOR 12-MONTH PROGRAM
ESTIMATED DIRECT EXPENSES	$37,104
ESTIMATED INDIRECT EXPENSES	$27,283

- The estimated direct expenses include tuition and fees for the program based on 2023-24 tuition rates. Tuition rates are subject to annual increases. You will be billed by Columbia for direct expenses after you register for each semester of the program.
- The estimated indirect expenses reflect the average cost of attending college full time in Chicago and include estimates for books and supplies, room and board, and transportation. You will not be billed by Columbia for indirect expenses and your actual expenses may vary.

Financing Your Graduate Degree at Columbia

Columbia will work closely with you to create a plan to finance your graduate program. We recommend that you submit the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (studentaid.gov) with the Columbia school code of 001665 for the academic year that you plan to begin your graduate program. For additional information on financing your graduate program, please visit colum.edu/columbiacentral.